Very impressive result, the sun glows like a Christmas star, and looks beautiful framed by the trees. It has also given a fantastic purple tint to the trees. Perfect use of the foreground to frame the sun, and a fine wintery scene. I love shots straight into the sun like this, this is a brilliant example.

Yet, after turning on the lights, he is again blinded, not by the darkness, but by the light. A gain, he stays in one spot for another few seconds until his eyes adjust to the light.

And he realizes that light and dark seem to have the same effect; they are both blinding, even if for a few seconds.

Chapter Three -Blinded By The Light Springsteen and us

In their nests, high in the trees, they woke with a chirping chatter. Hidden conversations led to flight plans being drawn and then as one, lift off. The early dawn sky was turned briefly dark again. Hidden conversations led to flight plans being drawn and then as one, lift off.
