Rock Climbing Ratings from 5.0 to 5.15 | Outdoors With Dave

A person who is a solid 5.8 climber theoretically should be able to climb through the crux (the hardest part of the climb) on any route rated 5.8 regardless of the type of rock or area they climb at. That is the theory anyway.

Unfortunately, climbs are not rated by a committee of climbers so a particular climb can be off as much as a letter grade or more. Having said that, the majority of

The Physiology of Rock Climbing SEND JOURNAL

The Physiology of Rock Climbing. Rock climbing is a physical sport. Climbers use their muscles to push, pull and stretch their way up the wall. That being said, in order to understand rock climbing one must understand the physical aspects of the sport. In this post we will first evaluate the general climber body type, learn what happens inside the body when climbing and learn how to
