Cleansing the Body While Sitting Vigil: Gently wash the face, neck, arms, hands, feet, and legs of the dying person with a lukewarm damp cloth if they are feverish, or a warm damp cloth if they are cold. After cleansing, apply a light moisturizer to their face, hands, arms, legs and feet. This keeps their skin feeling clean and soft, and gives them the gift of touch through massage of hands

When you stop and think about it, keeping vigil beside a resident preparing to leave this life is an enormous honor, privilege, and responsibility. It takes a special person to sit with a dying resident, and not everyone feels comfortable in this role. These are some of the qualities we look for in a Garden Angel volunteer:

Keeping Vigil with the Dying. September 11, 2014 by Sunny. Editor's note: this post was originally published on September 11, 2011. Thinking back today on that unimaginable morning in 2001 I am reminded of how long I sat, glued to the images repeating themselves on the television screen. It seemed the more horrific, more unbelievable the images became the more I had to watch. Like all of us
