Leningrad: State of Siege by Michael Jones

"Leningrad, State of Siege", Michael Jones, 2008. Almost every major city across America has constructed a museum or monument dedicated to the Holocaust. Indisputably the Jews suffered immensely during the second world war, but it was the slavic peoples who suffered the greatest, and who also probably fought the most desperately. The death toll in the Soviet Union alone reached nearly twenty

All offers of surrender from Leningrad must be rejected, wrote Adolph Hitler on September 29, 1941, at the outset of Operation Barbarossa. In this struggle for survival, we have no interest in keeping even a proportion of the city's population alive. During the famed 900-day siege of Leningrad, the German High Command deliberately

When the German High Command encircled Leningrad it was a deliberate policy to eradicate the city's civilian population by starving them to death. As winter set in and food supplies dwindled, starvation and panic set in. A specialist in battle psychology and the vital role of morale in desperate circumstances, Michael Jones tells the human
