The Battle of Messines Ridge tends to be overshadowed by the Third Battle of Ypres as it was a preliminary, but crucial operation leading up to the "great battle" in August. Consequently, this is one of the few resources available which examines the momentous battle for the high ground held by the Germans. No less than 19 tunnels were excavated under the German positions, packed with explosives, and set off with a "thunderclap of doom" according to RFC pilot Arthur Gould Lee. Pillars of Fire.
