"The Experience of Human Communication approaches everyday communication as a philosophical and psychological matter. Using insights from Merleau-Ponty, Heidegger, and Foucault, Frank J. Macke stresses that human communication - and with it, the human body - is, first and foremost, a relational phenomenon involving friends and family. Macke systematizes the concept and application of

As we advance through the levels of experience, we recapitulate the development of human intelligence itself. At some point our ancestors could only experience emotion, then they possessed beliefs, then they developed true intellect. As individuals, each of us repeats this same development process but only if we don't get stuck along the way.
